

Major Expansion at Vancouver Terminal Warehouse and Trailer Yard

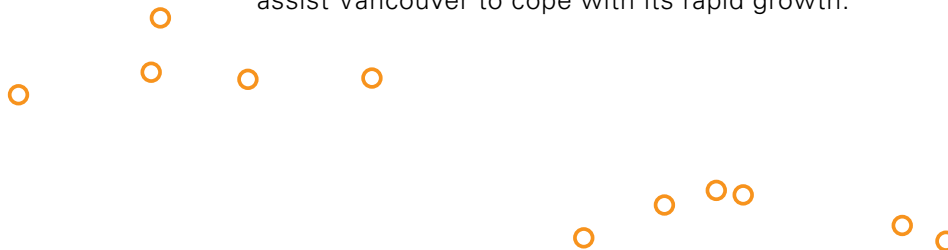

Only four years after the original move-in, Vancouver was fitted with an 8,000 sq. ft. structural mezzanine in February. "This greatly enhances our capacity for project storage," said Kim Varhaug, Terminal Manager, "and there's going to be huge demand shaping up for this kind of quality furniture storage in Vancouver as we ramp up to the 2010 Winter Olympics. Now we can bring in about 15 more trailer-loads, and it's starting to look like most of the space will be spoken for by the end of March, 2008! And having the new trailer parking lets us stage 20 more units outside for processing."

The warehouse was originally designed with columns and footings able to support the weight of a future mezzanine. "The need came a bit faster than we had expected, frankly," said Bob Hartin, CEO. "But we love these kind of surprises. This yard and warehouse expansion will keep some pressure off Vancouver for now, and when we open a Victoria terminal later this year, that will further assist Vancouver to cope with its rapid growth."

Did you know?

That Western Logistics is radically changing presentation materials which will also reflect the new web-site design coming soon?

Working closely with DesignHQ, our graphics and web-site design consultants, we believe that the new materials are “green,” elegant, and simple to understand and use.

One of the reasons that Western Logistics works so well is that we keep our processes as simple and technologically-efficient as possible. That practice, combined with the intense focus on a narrow niche – business and contract furniture and electronics – allows our personnel to really understand the business we’ve chosen to be in, and to perform to their full potential at all times.
