

Progress Report: New Saint-Laurent Terminal Comes out of Ground

In March, it was just a picture and a plan. In May, it is taking shape very rapidly, as 600 truck loads of top-soil are being removed for screening into landscape material, all being replaced by a structural steel skeleton which will soon house the Québec operations of Western Logistics. The site is perfect in every sense: environmentally perfect, geo-technically perfect, and located perfectly for future growth in an area of Saint-Laurent near Montreal's Techno-Parc, a sophisticated area of research and high-tech operations, close to the Trans-Canada and all key transportation arteries.

"We are delighted by the speed and quality of the construction by Groupe Montoni," said Bob Hartin, CEO. "We're going to have this facility working earlier than we expected. More important, the attention to detail by the professionals at Groupe Montoni will provide for us a "home" that every employee of Western Logistics will be proud to come to each day."

"When we get this building, we can do many more things than we do now," added Donald Brunet, Terminal Manager, "and we can add new routes that we have wanted to introduce for a long time."
